NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(INS)—Crack New York police investigators plunged into the bizarre Russian "kidnap" case today after school teacher Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina pleaded for constant protection from Communist Soviet officials.

Metropolitan police entered the international tug-of-war between Russian and American authorities on the appeal of fear-stricken Mrs. Kosenkina from the hospital bed where she was taken after leaping three stories from the Soviet Consulate.

In explanation of her act to escape confinement at the Consulate, the critically injured Mrs. Kosenkina sobbed intermittently under police questioning and said:

"I am afraid of them."
Mrs. Kosenkina, 52-year-old chemistry teacher, pleaded with deputy police inspector Edward F. Mullins during moments of consciousness that she did not want to see anyone from the Russian Consulate.

Declaring that she specifically wanted to visit from Vice Consul Zot L. Chepurnykh, she displayed anguish and cried:

"I'm afraid of them. I fear them, and I will not see them."

These words were emitted after she was informed that Chepurnykh was waiting in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hospital to see her.

Mullins, who already had surrounded her room with 13 policemen and a policewoman, said her wish would be respected. The inspector said that additional policemen and detectives would "cover" all windows, entrances and exits to Roosevelt Hospital.

Mullins said an immediate and complete top-to-bottom investigation would be started, adding:

"We're going to get to the bottom of this. We want to piece together the chain of mysterious circumstances which compelled the woman to plunge out of the window."

Chepurnykh when advised that Mrs. Kosenkina did not want to see him or anyone else from the Russian Consulate, shouted:

SOME GOT BIG BREAKS

By Ruth Brigham

(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 13.—(INS)—Who's afraid of Friday, the thirteenth?

Not Constance Bennett—for that's when she found her true love, Col. John Coulter. They met on the 13th—Friday—and have been happy ever since. Married, of course.

Gordon MacRae got his big break on Friday, the 13th. That's when he was singing to himself around the NBC studio in New York, and was overheard by Horace Heidt. Gordon's been singing to himself—as well as millions of listeners—ever since.

Marion Hutton, blonde songbird who has just hit high on radio, got a lucky break on Friday, the 13th. When she was out of a job in New York a few years ago, she attended a night club one night. The singer became ill. Marion was asked to substitute. She did. And was signed.

Ingrid Bergman arrived in this country—where she has scored top honors and run up a bank account—on Friday, 13.

Mae Murray, whose name will mean nothing to the youngsters, first saw her name in lights on Friday, the 13th.

Mary Astor had planned to take an automobile trip one Friday the thirteenth. She changed her mind at the last minute—two hours later the car ran over an embankment, killing all occupants.

Shirley Temple's daddy showed little Shirley's picture to one of his customers in a Los Angeles bank more than a decade ago. The customer, a studio executive, told the proud papa he had a cute kid there, and asked him to send her to the studio. Mr. Temple recalled later that the day was—Friday, 13.

BIPARTISANISM

PART THREE

The man who has done the most to try to "trademark" our foreign policy as bipartisan is, of course, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican. Shortly after the Democratic defeat in the Congressional elections of 1946, which was a repudiation by the public of the Truman Administration, Senator Vandenberg issued a statement which said, in effect, that the foreign policy had been bipartisan during the Democratic 79th Congress, and would continue to be bipartisan during the Republican 80th Congress.

Senator Vandenberg's views on this point have never been officially accepted by the Republican Party leadership, nor by the rank and file. The numerous occasions on which President Truman and his aids, since that time, have made important pronouncements without prior consultation with either Senator Vandenberg or any other party leader certainly indicates that the White House does not view foreign policy as bipartisan.

Those who listened to President Truman's acceptance speech at the Philadelphia convention heard nothing at all to bolster up the idea that he considers us to have a bipartisan foreign policy. It is quite true that early in 1945 President Roosevelt appointed Senator Vandenberg to be a delegate to the San Francisco conference. It is also true that before that appointment, Senator Vandenberg was a vehement critic of the United Nations Charter, calling it among other things a "straitjacket;" whereas since then he has been an apologist and defender of the same charter he once attacked so vigorously.

But does the giving to a Republican by a Democratic President of this job and its associated honors make the foreign policy "bipartisan"—so that the millions of other Republicans, not so singled out for honor, should be estopped from discussing the weaknesses and error in our foreign affairs; estopped so completely that the unanswered criticisms by Senator Vandenberg of the fundamentals of United Nations should be allowed to moulder forever in obscurity?

Of course not. It may not be that the vigorous discipline used by the Republican Party in 1940 when it summarily read out of the party two men who deserted its cause for awards at the hands of the New Dealers under Roosevelt, has any application to the present situation.

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Aug. 13.—When Bensalem township school directors met in the high school building here, Wednesday evening, they decided to add one more bus to the present fleet; awarded contract for supplying coal during the coming winter; and heard report on progress of improvements to the school buildings.

Painting of interior and exterior of Penn Valley School has been completed, and painting of some classrooms at the local high school finished, board members were told. The work on construction of the annex to the high school building has been slowed, due to non-availability of reinforcement steel, it was stated.

A partition is to be erected in the cafeteria to separate the cooking section from the dining tables. This is being done so that the dining section will be available for temporary classrooms until the annex at the high school is completed.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, when two cars collided last night at the intersection of Lincoln Highway and Street road. Both cars were completely demolished.

The injured persons are: Aida Reynolds, Welsh avenue and Blue Grass avenues, Bustleton, multiple abrasions of left leg and arms, contusion of right forehead, and possible skull fracture; Earl Holloway, 3786 Park Place, "Pennypack," operator of one car, lacerated artery in left arm. Holloway and Miss Reynolds were occupants in one car.

Albert Augustine, 5216 W. 63rd street, Chicago, Ill., operator of the other car, bruised knee, and a passenger with him, Lillian Balis, laceration of left knee, upper lip and left thigh.

According to Privates George Vaccendak and S. R. Balut of the state police, Langhorne barracks, Holloway was travelling east on Route 1 and was making a turn to travel north on Street road when the car operated by Augustine, travelling west on Route 1, also made a turn and the cars crashed.

The injured persons were taken to Nazareth Hospital, Philadelphia, by the Trevose Rescue Squad.

Roadside Rest is Built South of Quakertown

QUAKERTOWN, Aug. 13.—Motorists traveling the Bethlehem pike will find the newly state-constructed Roadside Rest, located about one-half a mile south of Quakertown, of great help.

The accommodation is one of ten which the State Highways Department has constructed along arterial highways.

The site is reported ideal for picnic lunches or just for stopping to enjoy the scenery and rest. It is entirely non-commercial and costs the traveler nothing. The grove near Quakertown, in addition to drinking water and parking space, includes lavatory facilities, picnic tables, benches and outdoor fireplaces.

Roadside Rests, according to the highway department, are ideal for the family vacationing by automobile and wishing to have a picnic lunch or supper. The Upper Bucks county site was selected along the three-lane highway where the line and grade has been permanently established.

The travel accommodations were first provided by the state in 1915, when $150,000 of the motor fund money was appropriated for their construction, with single locations limited to a cost of $2,500. Because of higher prices, the 1947 legislation increased the amount to $3,500.

While the Quakertown rest was one of the original ten the highway department has work under way for more than 50 others.

SOME LATE BLIGHT

Bucks county tomato crop is in danger of being drastically cut due to excessive rains and the appearance of a "late blight."

It is explained, however, that if we have good weather during the next couple of weeks, the entire situation may be altered.

At the office of the big Kings Farms, above Tullytown a spokesman said that "good weather in the next couple of weeks may alter the entire situation. As it appears now it is figured there will be a 30 to 40 per cent loss." The blight has not as yet appeared here.

Baker Brothers, another big tomato grower in this area, said that the blight has not appeared in their crops yet.

Lester C. Jones, president of the New Jersey-Penna. Cooperative Growers' Association, forecast a 50 per cent crop loss to south Jersey eastern Pennsylvania tomato growers because of a "late blight" and last week's excessive rains.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

A leap from a third-floor room of the Soviet Consulate at 7 East 61st Street, where she had been in seclusion, yesterday seriously injured Mrs. Oksana Stepanovna Kosenkina, the Russian teacher whose presence in court had been demanded the day before in a State Supreme Court writ of habeas corpus. Mrs. Kosenkina told police she jumped but was unable to give a reason for her act. The Soviet Consul General said Mrs. Kosenkina apparently had tried to commit suicide after listening to a radio news report.

Another Russian teacher, Mikhail Ivanovich Samarin, gave testimony before a closed hearing of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. His evidence was later described by the committee chairman as "not of pertinent significance." President Truman reiterated his charge that the spy inquiry was a "red herring" that smelled very badly.

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov summoned United States Ambassador Smith to the Kremlin and told him United States Government authorities had connived in the kidnapping of two Russian teachers by "white guard gangsters" here.

In the fifth of their series of conferences over the Berlin situation and other East-West differences, the representatives of the United States, Britain and France met with Mr. Molotov in the Kremlin for nearly three hours. General Smith, United States Ambassador, said the negotiations were still "without any conclusions" but he indicated that they would continue.

In Berlin, Soviet military police and their German aides twice invaded the zone of the city occupied by the Western powers, ostensibly in pursuit of black market operators, but were turned back with a warning to stay out of the area.

Hundreds of thousands of German workers in the United States zone of occupation in Germany staged widespread demonstrations to protest against high prices and the refusal of General Clay to approve a measure enacted by the State Parliament. The measure would give workers a voice in the direction of industry.

At the Belgrade conference on the Danube, the British delegate asked that the Soviet Union prove her claim to be a Danubian country with direct territorial interests in the strategic waterway.

In Palestine the Latrun pumping station, key to Jerusalem's water supply, was blasted by saboteurs. The Israeli Government characterized the action as a breach of the

MORE MILES PER GALLON

It is revealed that motor car manufacturers are planning action to conserve America's dwindling oil resources. They will presently manufacture engines with still higher compression which are expected to yield 30 to 40 per cent more miles per gallon.

Higher compression means that the gasoline and air mixture is squeezed into a smaller space before being ignited by the spark. The result is that gasoline is more completely burned, giving greater power from the same quantity of fuel. Stepping up of compression ratios has been a gradual process ever since the first automobile was made.

But motors now planned will require higher test gasoline—fuel of at least a 93 octane rating, compared with the top for premium gasoline today of about 87 octanes. Petroleum industry is expected to be able to fill all demands, as gasoline of more than 100 octane rating can now be refined.

Many years will elapse before the industry is equipped for large-scale production of synthetic gasoline. Fuel-saving motors will help stretch gasoline supplies.

HOUSEKEEPING BLUES

In past years, it has been said, some women regarded their duties as housewives as too monotonous—constituting a dull round of the same things over and over again.

They became tired of the constant succession of cooking and cleaning and all the rest of it. Perhaps there are some who feel that way now. What can they do to make this never-stopping merry-go-round more interesting?

Modern facilities have greatly lightened the labors of housework. Housewives have found that the use of these facilities gives them more spare time to devote to outside activities, providing a pleasant change from the routine of housework. Many have taken jobs in the commercial and industrial world, from which they derive welcome variety as well as not to be sneezed at remuneration.

Newspapers, books, radio—all these help to make life for the housewife less monotonous than formerly.

Science finds that rats will starve in sight of food rather than use a new way of getting it. They must be Communists.

A true optimist would rather believe the best and be fooled than to know the truth if it's bad.

Bipartisanship

On the other hand, it is a most unhappy situation for a man for whom the Republican Party was a stepping stone to greatness now to cry "bipartisan! bipartisan!" about matters over which the Republican Party does not now and has not had a voice; and to persistently defend and apologize for institutions which can be convincingly indicted right out of his own previous utterances.

Much the same line of reasoning applies also, and with equal force, to John Foster Dulles, who is the other outstanding person who constantly preaches that foreign policy, being bipartisan, is a subject where the Republicans are estopped from protesting even the most outrageous and costly blunders by the Administration.

Desperately near as the world has drifted towards a Third World War, as a result of these New Deal policies and actions now mislabeled bipartisan, it may be that it would still be possible to find again the road to peace, justice and world harmony.

The only conceivable approach which can extricate the United States, and the rest of the earth, from the abyss of war into which we are drifting, would be a fearless re-examination of the bases upon which alone a just and lasting peace can be founded.

This means a review of the mistakes of the past—not perhaps so much as to censure those who committed them, as to permit their cure and their future avoidance.

It means also a fresh, honest, candid approach to the problems as they lie today; a "new start," in the sense that it should be in the hands of those who are not fettered at the outset by their entanglements in the blunders and commitments of the past.

The main consideration which is being advanced today to prevent such a new beginning on peace being made, as it should be made, at the hands of a Republican President next January, is the fiction that the Republicans are just as much bound by the errors of Roosevelt, and Hull, and Byrnes, and Stettinius, and Marshall and Truman, as the Democrats are—because everything which they did wrong has been "bipartisan."

Even on the road to disaster, there's always room to turn around.

Isn't it possible, by means of the coming election, to wash our hands of the mistakes of the past, to go into court with clean hands and a clean slate—and to rebuild the peace from the ground up?

Washington granted diplomatic recognition to the Korean Government, recently elected in South Korea, and named John J. Muccio as its representative to Seoul with the rank of Ambassador.

President Truman deplored the record of the recent special session of Congress and said it had yielded poor and meager results. He called it a "do-nothing" session, and he offered a "box score" of its omissions.

SOVIET TEACHER AT RED CLOSED HEARING

Self-styled fugitive from Russian vengeance, Mikhail Samarin (left) arrives to testify before a closed session of the House Un-American Activities Committee in Washington. He is escorted by Rep. Karl E. Mundt (right), acting chairman of the committee, and Louis Russell, committee investigator. Samarin, Russian teacher for children of Soviet diplomats, sought protection from the FBI after refusing to return to his homeland.—(International Soundphoto.)

"I don't believe it. I'm an official of the Soviet Government and I demand to see her."

The Soviet Vice Consul agreed with Mullins in the corridor of the hospital for permission to see Mrs. Kosenkina.

Chepurnykh stalked off with his chauffeur, and Consul General Jacob Lomakin's private secretary, Zina Ivanova, declaring "I'll be back in the morning."

Mullins said he had only questioned the Russian school teacher briefly "because of her condition." But, he said, she admitted that she made the plunge "to get out of the cage."

She had been held incommunicado at the Soviet Consulate for six days after her fantastic "rescue" from a white Russian camp outside Nyack, N. Y., 25 miles north of New York.

The police inspector said that while questioning her about her stay at the Consulate, the woman fainted many times, and that finally he decided to wait until "she is in better condition" before I get some answers to many unanswered questions.

The short, plump chemistry teacher, who instructed children of Soviet diplomats in the United States, called repeatedly for "my only friend in this country"—anti-Communist Russian journalist Vladimir Zenzinov.

When Zenzinov came to her bedside, she embraced him, smiled and kissed him.

The writer said she told him she plunged from the dining room window because she "was struggling to break out from the cage."

He said she declared her detention at the Soviet Consulate made her "like a bird in a cage," and declared "I had to get away."

Isaac Don Levine, author and member of the board of directors of Common Cause, an anti-Communist group, who accompanied Zenzinov charged that Mrs. Kosenkina was "a prisoner in the Consulate." He challenged Lomakin to produce what he termed the "phony letter" he read newsmen at a news conference after the teacher was "rescued" from the white Russian camp.

Zenzinov said that when he told the teacher she was "at last safe" and the people of the United States will protect you" she smiled happily.

Jones, whose organization represents about 150 farmers, said that to his knowledge every field of tomatoes being grown by the members of the association has been affected to some degree.

In many cases, Jones said, the crop will be a complete loss, while in others some acreage will be salvaged.

Jones pointed out that because of the delay in the season, primarily because of advance weather conditions early in the summer, the crop cannot be rushed to the market since it is not expected to reach maturity before the end of the month, or about two weeks later than normal.

Discussing his own case, Jones, who has 39 acres in tomatoes, said his fields are affected to some extent, but that he has managed to cut his loss by spraying his acreage every week or 10 days.

Pointing to the possible acuteness of the situation, Jones recalled that many farmers planted only about 65 percent of their normal tomato acreage this year because of the lower contract price offered by canners.

He said that Campbell Soup Co., Camden, one of the area's largest consumers, is paying $26 a ton for No. 1 grade, and $25 per ton for 2's in contrast to $29 and $28 a ton respectively last year.

Jones also noted that due to the scarcity of the current crop, farmers selling to the "fresh" or daily market are getting as high as $3.00 a half-bushel basket.

Jones declared that during a recent conference with representatives of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America in Baltimore, he had been advised by Dr. T. H. Symons, director and dean of the University of Maryland, that the crop along the Eastern Shore will

ONEYMOON COTTAGE

Green She Might Be as a housekeeper, no bride would have out fun learning home-making routines in a cozy little honeymoon cottage like this. All on one floor, it would be easy as pie to keep in order. It would be a fine house, too, for an elderly couple

By MARION CLAYDE MCCARROLL

What could be more ideal for a newly wed couple to move into than a honeymoon cottage just big enough for two?

Here's a house that just fills the bill for that first year or two before an addition to the family makes it necessary to find larger quarters. As a matter of fact, though it might be a snug fit, the house should do very well even with a baby in it for awhile, in which case the dining space might be converted into a wee nursery.

Of course, a one-bedroom house such as this would suit a man and wife in their later years fully as happily as the bride and groom. Being all on one floor, it would have all the step-saving advantages of an apartment—something very much appreciated as folks grow older and find stair-climbing a bit of a tax on breath and knees—and yet have all the dignity of being an independent home.

For a tiny house, it has a good deal of convenience compactly tucked into its space, and the floor plan is unusually well arranged. Note the entry at the front door, so much more satisfactory than having the door open directly into the living room; the little hallway into which one steps from the living room, providing more privacy for bedroom and bath than is usually found in so small a place; the four closets, so conveniently located.

Since living room, bedroom and kitchen each occupy a corner of the house, each one also has cross-ventilation, a boon in the summer-time.

If desired, a porch could easily be added on the side of the house or across the back and screened to make an outdoor living room for the warm weather.

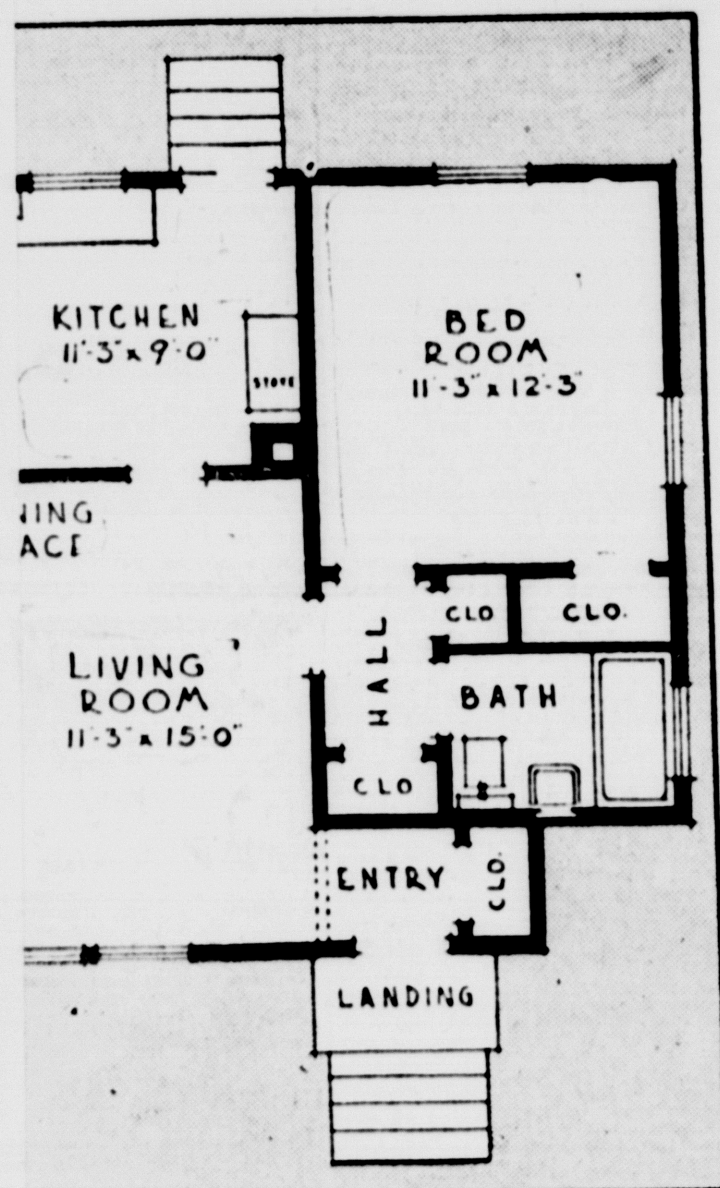

A flue is provided in the center of the house so that one heating unit in the living room is sufficient to heat the whole house.

Production Management Is One of Courses Offered

Adults interested in learning more about the technical and humanistic aspects of industrial management will be afforded the opportunity to pursue study in production management at the Bristol Class Center of The Pennsylvania State College beginning September 27.

The purpose of the program, according to Alfred E. Lewis, administrative head, is to train those people who are responsible for the planning, controlling, and supervision of mass production with emphasis on preparation in enlightened work. The courses in this field being held at the Bristol High School will include algebra, industrial organization and management, principles of engineering drawing, human nature and management, the shop foreman, time study, and safety engineering. These courses will meet one hour each for two evenings a week, and could total six hours of class room instruction per week. Other programs scheduled for the Bristol Class will be in business administration, industrial electricity, mechanical and production tool design, accounting, production management and secretarial studies. The courses are open to both men and women, veterans and non-veterans. Veterans should contact the nearest Veterans Administration office for information on taking these programs under Public Law 346 or Public Law 16.

Registration for the courses, according to Lewis, is at the Borough Hall in Bristol from August 16 through August 20 at seven p. m. to nine p. m., and on Saturday, August 21, from nine a. m. to five p. m. Registration will also be conducted for residents of the Morrisville area at the employment office of the Vulcanized Rubber and Plastic Company during the same hours.

MORE MILES PER GALLON

It is revealed that motor car manufacturers are planning action to conserve America's dwindling oil resources. They will presently manufacture engines with still higher compression which are expected to yield 30 to 40 per cent more miles per gallon.

Higher compression means that the gasoline and air mixture is squeezed into a smaller space before being ignited by the spark. The result is that gasoline is more completely burned, giving greater power from the same quantity of fuel. Stepping up of compression ratios has been a gradual process, ever since the first automobile was made.

But motors now planned will require higher test gasoline—fuel of at least a 93 octane rating, compared with the top for premium gasoline today of about 87 octanes. Petroleum industry is expected to be able to fill all demands, as gasoline of more than 100 octane rating can now be refined.

Many years will elapse before the industry is equipped for large-scale production of synthetic gasoline. Fuel-saving motors will help stretch gasoline supplies.

HOUSEKEEPING BLUES

In past years, it has been said, some women regarded their duties as housewives as too monotonous—constituting a dull round of the same things over and over again.

They became tired of the constant succession of cooking and cleaning and all the rest of it. Perhaps there are some who feel that way now. What can they do to make this never-stopping merry-go-round more interesting?

Modern facilities have greatly lightened the labors of housework. Housewives have found that the use of these facilities gives them more spare time to devote to outside activities, providing a pleasant change from the routine of housework. Many have taken jobs in the commercial and industrial world, from which they derive welcome variety as well as not to be sneezed at remuneration. Newspapers, books, radio—all these help to make life for the housewife less monotonous than formerly.

Science finds that rats will starve in sight of food rather than use a new way of getting it. They must be Communists.

A true optimist would rather believe the best and be fooled than to know the truth if it's bad.

On the other hand, it is a most unhappy situation for a man for whom the Republican Party was a stepping stone to greatness now to cry "bipartisan! bipartisan!" about matters over which the Republican Party does not now and has not had a voice; and to persistently defend and apologize for institutions which can be convincingly indicted right out of his own previous utterances.

Much the same line of reasoning applies also, and with equal force, to John Foster Dulles, who is the other outstanding person who constantly preaches that foreign policy, being bipartisan, is a subject where the Republicans are estopped from protesting even the most outrageous and costly blunders by the Administration.

Desperately near as the world has drifted towards a Third World War, as a result of these New Deal policies and actions now mislabeled bipartisan, it may be that it would still be possible to find again the road to peace, justice and world harmony.

The only conceivable approach which can extricate the United States, and the rest of the earth, from the abyss of war into which we are drifting, would be a fearless re-examination of the bases upon which alone a just and lasting peace can be founded.

This means a review of the mistakes of the past—not perhaps so much as to censure those who committed them, as to permit their cure and their future avoidance.

It means also a fresh, honest, candid approach to the problems as they lie today; a "new start," in the sense that it should be in the hands of those who are not fettered at the outset by their entanglements in the blunders and commitments of the past.

The main consideration which is being advanced today to prevent such a new beginning on peace being made, as it should be made, at the hands of a Republican President next January, is the fiction that the Republicans are just as much bound by the errors of Roosevelt, and Hull, and Byrnes, and Stettinius, and Marshall and Truman, as the Democrats are—because everything which they did wrong has been "bipartisan."

Even on the road to disaster, there's always room to turn around.

Isn't it possible, by means of the coming election, to wash out hands of the mistakes of the past, to go into court with clean hands and a clean slate—and to rebuild the peace from the ground up?

Crack Investigators Plunge Into Russian 'Kidnap' Case

"I don't believe it. I'm an official of the Soviet Government and I demand to see her."

The Soviet Vice Consul agreed with Mullins in the corridor of the hospital for permission to see Mrs. Kosenkina.

Chepurnykh stalked off with his chauffeur, and Consul General Jacob Lomakin's private secretary, Zina Ivanova, declaring "I'll be back in the morning."

Mullins said he had only questioned the Russian school teacher briefly "because of her condition." But, he said, she admitted that she made the plunge "to get out of the cage."

She had been held incommunicado at the Soviet Consulate for six days after her fantastic "rescue" from a white Russian camp outside Nyack, N. Y., 25 miles north of New York.

The police inspector said that while questioning her about her stay at the Consulate, the woman fainted many times, and that finally he decided to wait until "she is in better condition" before he got some answers to many unanswered questions.

The short, plump chemistry teacher, who instructed children of Soviet diplomats in the United States, called repeatedly for "my only friend in this country"—anti-Communist Russian journalist Vladimir Zenzinov.

When Zenzinov came to her bedside, she embraced him, smiled and kissed him.

The writer said she told him she plunged from the dining room window because she "was struggling to break out from the cage."

He said she declared her detention at the Soviet Consulate made her "like a bird in a cage," and declared "I had to get away."

Isaac Don Levine, author and member of the board of directors of Common Cause, an anti-Communist group, who accompanied Zenzinov charged that Mrs. Kosenkina was "a prisoner in the Consulate." He challenged Lomakin to produce what he termed the "phony letter" he read newsmen at a news conference after the teacher was "rescued" from the white Russian camp.

Zenzinov said that when he told the teacher she was "at last safe" and the people of the United States will protect you," she smiled happily.

Tomato Crop May Be Drastically Cut

Jones, whose organization represents about 150 farmers, said that to his knowledge every field of tomatoes being grown by the members of the association has been affected to some degree.

In many cases, Jones said, the crop will be a complete loss, while in others some acreage will be salvaged.

Jones pointed out that because of the delay in the season, primarily because of advance weather conditions early in the summer, the crop cannot be rushed to the market since it is not expected to reach maturity before the end of the month, or about two weeks later than normal.

Discussing his own case, Jones, who has 39 acres in tomatoes, said his fields are affected to some extent, but that he has managed to cut his loss by spraying his acreage every week or 10 days.

Pointing to the possible acuteness of the situation, Jones recalled that many farmers planted only about 65 percent of their normal tomato acreage this year because of the lower contract price offered by canners.

He said that Campbell Soup Co., Camden, one of the area's largest consumers, is paying $36 a ton for No. 1 grade, and $25 per ton for 2's in contrast to $29 and $28 a ton respectively last year.

Jones also noted that due to the scarcity of the current crop, farmers selling to the "fresh" or daily market, are getting as high as $3.00 a half-bushel basket.

Jones declared that during a recent conference with representatives of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America in Baltimore, he had been advised by Dr. T. B. Symons, director and dean of the University of Maryland, that the crop along the Eastern Shore will

HONEYMOON COTTAGE

Ever Green She Might Be as a housekeeper, no bride would have but fun learning home-making routines in a cozy little honey-moon cottage like this. All on one floor, it would be easy as pie to keep in order. It would be a fine house, too, for an elderly couple

By MARION CLAYDE McCARROLL

What could be more ideal for a newly wed couple to move into than a honeymoon cottage just big enough for two?

Here's a house that just fills the bill for that first year or two before an addition to the family makes it necessary to find larger quarters. As a matter of fact, though it might be a snug fit, the house should do very well even with a baby in it for awhile, in which case the dining space might be converted into a wee nursery.

Of course, a one-bedroom house such as this would suit a man and wife in their later years fully as happily as the bride and groom. Being all on one floor, it would have all the step-saving advantages of an apartment—something very much appreciated as folks grow older and find stair-climbing a bit of a tax on breath and knees—and yet have all the dignity of being an independent home.

For a tiny house, it has a good deal of convenience compactly tucked into its space, and the floor plan is unusually well arranged. Note the entry at the front door, so much more satisfactory than having the door open directly into the living room; the little hallway into which one steps from the living room, providing more privacy for bedroom and bath than is usually found in so small a place; the four closets, so conveniently located.

Since living room, bedroom and kitchen each occupy a corner of the house, each one also has cross-ventilation, a boon in the summer-time.

If desired, a porch could easily be added on the side of the house or across the back, and screened to make an outdoor living room for the warm weather.

A flue is provided in the center of the house so that one heating unit in the living room is sufficient to heat the whole house.

Production Management Is One of Courses Offered

Adults interested in learning more about the technical and humanistic aspects of industrial management will be afforded the opportunity to pursue study in production management at the Bristol Class Center of The Pennsylvania State College beginning September 27.

The purpose of the program, according to Alfred E. Lewis, administrative head, is to train those people who are responsible for the planning, controlling, and supervision of mass production with emphasis on preparation in enlightened control work. The courses in this field being held at the Bristol High School will include algebra, industrial organization and management, principles of engineering drawing, human nature and management, the shop foreman, time study, and safety engineering. These courses will meet one hour each for two evenings a week, and could total six hours of class room instruction per week. Other programs scheduled for the Bristol Class will be in business administration, industrial electricity, mechanical and production tool design, accounting, production management and secretarial studies. The courses are open to both men and women, veterans and non-veterans. Veterans should contact the nearest Veterans Administration office for information on taking these programs under Public Law 346 or Public Law 16.

Registration for the courses, according to Lewis, is at the Borough Hall in Bristol from August 16 through August 20 at seven p. m. to nine p. m., and on Saturday, August 21, from nine a. m. to five p. m. Registration will also be conducted for residents of the Morrisville area at the employment office of the Vulcanized Rubber and Plastic Company during the same hours.

MORE PEOPLE BUY CHEVROLETS THAN ANY OTHER CAR

COMPARE the values; compare the prices!...

Do this and you'll know that now more than ever before CHEVROLET AND ONLY CHEVROLET IS FIRST in Big-Car quality at lowest prices, just as it is first in nationwide demand for the total 17-year period, 1931 to date!

To compare the values is to know that only Chevrolet brings you the Big-Car riding-smoothness of the original and outstanding Unitized Knee-Action Ride... the Big-Car performance and dependability of a world's champion Valve-in-Head engine... the Big-Car beauty and luxury of the enviable Body by Fisher... the Big-Car safety of Fisher Unisteel Body-Construction and Positive-Action Hydraulic Brakes... plus many another major quality advantage still not available in any other motor car in its field.

And to compare the prices is to know that Chevrolet prices are the lowest in the field... and that Chevrolet value continues to be the highest in its field!
